“ I'm sorry to only today be learning of my brother-in-law's service. Regardless, I will always cherish the memory of giving my big sister the dress she wore on the day she married Danny in Las Vegas. I will also always hold close the tiny, kind things about Danny: the way he helped me to paint my porch railings when he saw that I was struggling to get it ready in time for a party, when my own husband was too busy. The way he spontaneously gave me a giraffe he won in the claw machine at a pizza place... It's always these little things - - the gift of a dress, a sunny afternoon on a front porch, even a stuffed toy (long ago donated to a needy child).
