“ Jim was my brother and I will miss him and hope that he is with our parents in heaven. Jim could fix anything which he learned from my Dad. They would buy an item that had to be assembled and after they were finished putting it together they would read the instructions to see if they did it right. He could build anything, I wish I had the same abilities.

“ I have to say that Jimmy was one of the most knowledgeable people I have ever met. He knew more about mechanics and physics than any professor I ever had in college. One thing is for sure, if it was man-made and broken, Jimmy could fix it. He knew more about raising vegetables than I can ever hope to know. Just seemed to always be on top of everything going on around him in this world. A master of this physical world we live in.

In short, he was a great man to know, and a good friend to talk to. I imagine right now he is already installing a new AC in heaven, and fixing a broken angel wing if there are any.

“ we've known Jimmy and Cindy since our Denver days.....early 1970's. Jimmy and John worked together for many years. we all left Denver and worked in Fl. a bit but soon we were sent to other areas.

Jimmy taught John to fly model airplanes and they spent many an hour out in the fields "flying", from control-line to RC they kept busy. and stayed friends

We are just getting moved to Florida and were looking forward to seeing ya all in person.. not over the internet but the Lord had other ideas.

someday Jimmy, John will fly with you again so start building the planes!!
