“ I always enjoyed talking to Mr.Cook and talking about family, and hows things were when we were growing up. We had great times out at the ball field where Allen and I became lifelong friends and still are to this day.

Mr.Quinton and Mrs. Cook always welcomed me into their home when I was a teenager. I always think back to the phrase we still often use, "it takes a village to raise kids" and they always did their part.

I could always be sure if I got out of line, and Mr, Quinton found out about it he would definitely bring it to my attention. I am truly grateful that I had men and women like him and Mrs.Cook in my life early on as great role models of how a marriage should be. They were honest, hard working people with great character and great integrity. They always had my sincere respect.

We have truly lost another one of the "greatest generation." He will be missed but we will see him again. We as Christians know how the story ends.

To live in the hearts of those we love is not to die.

Not goodbye, but so long for now Mr. Quinton. We will see you on the other side of this life.
